Because of confusion over antipopes, deaths, abdications, and wrong history, there is confusion in the numbering of several series of names. The name given is the official numbering that they called themselves or which history generally calls them. The actual occurrence they were numerically of a given name is given in parentheses. Additional variations are given in brackets. One will often see minor variations in lists and numbering, as there is still some confusion over who was the pope during times when there was at least one antipope.
